TRAVEL

The highways are dotted with tourists. The tourist camps are dotted with tourists. The restaurants are dotted with tourists. Tourists are dotting up about every nook, corner and cranny of the United States today. But this seems needless. We all know it. What we mean to say is, that something ought to be done about the needless array of billboards, ruining our landscape, spoiling our tourists' views, and defacing highways that otherwise would lend the vigor and inspiration of Nature to the passing world. Samuel Hoffenstein, writing in his book, "Poems in Praise of Practically Nothing," notices it, and bursts forth with this observant verse:

"Along the country road there grow

Willow-trees and Texaco,
Mobiloils and marigold

And other fruits of men and mould.

Oh, how my town-cried heart desires

To know the peace of Kelley
Tires.

To hear the robin in the grass
Sing, 'Socony' as I pass!

Some day I shall fly the rut
And build a small, bucolic hut,

Trim a hedge and hop a stile,
Walk my camel for a mile,

Milk a mid-Victorian cow—
Eventually—but not now."

And so that is what is happening to our roads—what is taking place along the highways alleged to be dotted with scenery.

ACCIDENTS

One is interested in the report of a large insurance company that states for the first time in 27 years there has been a decline in the mortality record from automobile fatalities. While the decline is slight, it is, nevertheless, said to be encouraging since the death rate from this cause has shown a decided increase every year. "If this improvement holds throughout the year," the insurance bulletin reads, "the efforts of interested agencies will have at last accomplished some little measure of success in depressing the death rate from automobile fatalities." With 23,125,000 registered automobiles in our nation, traveling 3,000,000 miles of highways, there are naturally bound to be accidents as a Pennsylvania railroad bulletin, urging carefulness, of course, observes. Incidentally, there are 235,158 grade crossings for them to be damaged at, and their occupants killed. The highway problem is big already and growing. In 1927, more than 25,000 persons were killed in the United States and 798,700 injured. Think it over when you step on the gas.

OLD TIMER SAYS

"At intervals we often hear folk blame the presidential year for sex and soaks and sundry crimes and what we choose to call 'hard times'.

"The dawning of another day will see these things all pass away; they'll sag and droop and surely die when fall election passes by.

"The howl goes up on every hand, from coast to coast, across the land, that business simply must be bum when presidential campaigns come.

"Yet all around us other folks are prone to laugh and talk and joke; they step right out with vim and dash and get the business with the cash.

"Each year's a presidential year for those who are the slaves of fear, while those who fight for trade and grin rake lots of extra dollars in."

Hervey Swayer clips the above from "The Blank Book News" and gives it to this column. And it's real wisdom. Most people are pessimists because they seem to find solace for their own lack of ingenuity or ability in blaming it on the year, the weather, or what not. Inspect yourself, first, before you blame rotten business on something else, and see if you aren't wrong.

RUSSIA TO ACCEPT ANTI-
WAR PACT

Many Reservations and Interpretations Included In Note From Litvinoff.

By GEORGE LYONS

United Press Staff Correspondent. MOSCOW, Sept. 1.—Russia has accepted France's invitation to sign the anti-war pact—but with many reservations and requests for interpretation.

M. M. Litvinoff, assistant commissar of foreign affairs, yesterday handed French Ambassador Herbet a lengthy note accepting the invitation. The note said that the pact was incapable of preventing war but added:

"Nevertheless inasmuch as the pact objectively imposes certain obligations upon the powers before public opinion and gives the Soviet government a new chance to put before all participants of the pact the question of disarmament solution—the only guarantee for preventing war—the Soviet government expresses its consent to sign the pact."

Litvinoff said it seemed strange that the Soviet government had not been invited to participate in the preliminary negotiations—Russia was not invited as an original signatory—recounting the conference in Geneva and also her series of bilateral treaties for outlawing war.

He recognized the absence in the pact of any disarmament obligations, and protested against the "insufficient definiteness and clearness of the first clause" which permits arbitrary interpretation by the participants. He also stated the pact failed to mention "informal" wars—the pact dealing with wars of aggression—which he interpreted as "intervention, blockade by military occupation, blockade of foreign territory and foreign ports."

On this latter score he cited previous interventions in Russia and the present intervention in China.

Litvinoff especially attacked the British reservation which deals with freedom of action towards certain regions. "If that reservation means portions of the British empire, then the reservation is superfluous. If it means elsewhere the participants of the pact are entitled to know where the freedom of action of the British government begins and ends."

He concluded by saying that "this reservation the Soviet government can not but consider an attempt to use the pact itself as an instrument of imperialistic policy."

OSLO, NORWAY, Sept. 1.—Roald Amundsen and his companions who flew out over the Arctic to aid survivors of the wrecked dirigible Italia plunged to death in Barents Sea on the night of June 18, it appeared almost certain today.

CHINAMAN MUST HANG ON NOV. 6

FAIRFIELD, Calif., Sept. 1.—(UP)—Leong Ying, Chinese ranch hand, who killed 11 members of his own race near here nine days ago, must hang on Nov. 9 for his crime.

The Oriental, who murdered more persons in a single day than any other criminal of California's history, took his sentence calmly, having pleaded guilty; and admitted he was ready for punishment.

Several expert witnesses were called by Judge W. T. O'Donnell yesterday before he ordered the death penalty.

They testified that Ying was sane and refuted his contention that his victims had attempted to kill him by poisoning his food.

OUT OF DANGER

CINCINNATI, Sept. 1.—Curt Walker, right fielder of the Cincinnati Reds who sustained a slight fracture of the skull when hit by a thrown ball in Friday's Cincinnati-Chicago game, rested well throughout the night and Saturday morning was considered out of danger.

Religion Will Not Be Involved In Smith's Campaign

LONOKE, Ark., Sept. 1.—The question of Governor Smith's Catholicism in its relation to his presidential candidacy has been brought out as a subject of open campaign discussion by the governor's running mate, Senator Joseph T. Robinson.

Robinson, speaking at a homecoming celebration held in his honor here, told his fellow townsmen that Governor Smith had been misrepresented and that his record in New York State showed "he had not been a Catholic governor, a Baptist governor nor a Methodist governor."

"He has been an American governor," Robinson emphasized.

The same note was sounded by Senator George, of Georgia, who urged that religion should not be mixed with politics and that "we judge our citizens by what they are and what their records show them to be."

It was indicated by persons in Senator Robinson's party that this meeting was a preface to other pleas for religious tolerance and for the separation of religion and politics, which will be made in the Democratic campaign, especially in the South, where Robinson will speak extensively.

Wheel of Plane Carrying Princess Ann Is Found Near Iceland.

By KENDALL FOSS

United Press Staff Correspondent. LONDON, Sept. 1.—Just one year from the time that 63-year-old Princess Ann of Lowenstein-Wertheim made her gallant bid to fame in an attempt at a westwardly crossing of the Atlantic, the fate of that attempt apparently became known today.

The big Fokker airplane she was using, along with two male companions, obviously crashed at midsea.

Thursday an airplane wheel was found floating off Skapatais, Iceland. It was a dismal reminder of some ill fated over water flight. On the outer edge of the tire was the marking:

"Palladium, 1100x220."

A check back was made with the big Palladium tire manufacturing company in London and officials found that the tire and wheel were identical with the ones used on the St. Raphael, the name of the Fokker which Princess Ann used on her trans-Atlantic flight. There was little question, the officials said, but that the wheel was from that plane.

It was the first word of the St. Raphael in exactly one year.

On Aug. 31, 1927, Princess Ann and her two flying companions, Col. F. F. Minchin and Captain Leslie Hamilton decided on a trans-Atlantic flight. Early that morning they whirled the big Fokker away from an English landing field and started westwardly towards a fate that was problematical.

Never had any one succeeded in making that dangerous flight. Nungesser and Col. Coli, the gallant French war veterans, had disappeared. Other English flyers had disappeared.

Princess Ann, titled, wealthy, and nearing the close of a luxurious life, had decided on this great thrill of flying over the unknown Atlantic. She was the first woman ever to attempt anything so dangerous but she had all the confidence in her big Fokker plane and the two English war veteran flyers.

LOCAL MEN FIGURE IN ACCIDENT ON FRIDAY EVENING

Proctor Baughman and Melvin S. Rinehart, of this city, were implicated in an automobile accident which occurred Friday evening as they were driving north on the Columbus-pk. when their car, a Studebaker, was sideswiped by a Lincoln sedan, driven by Joseph O'Shaughnessy, of Columbus.

It is alleged that Mr. O'Shaughnessy was driving on the wrong side of the road and that the local men, in endeavoring to avoid the crash, drove into a filling station. In the impact, Mr. Rinehart was knocked from the front seat, but fortunately escaped with but a slight injury to his right hand.

The right and left fenders were torn from the Baughman car, and the entire side was smashed.

Another car coming into the filling station at the time narrowly escaped collision with the cars.

Charred Wreckage of Lindy Death Plane

In a Falcon-Curtiss biplane, which was owned and soon to be flown by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, M. M. Merrill, manager of Curtiss Field, New York, and Edwin Ronne, manager of Boston's municipal airport, crashed to death. The shattered and fire-swept ruins above, were sighted by air searchers in the depths of a wilderness near Milford, Conn. The tragedy recalled that Col. Lindbergh's life had once been imperiled when he was forced down by a fire in the same plane.

ANOTHER SUBWAY ACCIDENT IN NEW YORK CITY

Accident Proves Of No Serious Consequence; Few Injured.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Almost within a week of the fatal accident on the interborough Subway lines, another accident occurred early today resulting in four injuries.

A 10 car passenger train of the I. R. T., operating on the elevated part of the system, sideswiped a supply train.

There was a derailment. Steel coming in contact with the third rail sent great electric flashes into the air and the 75 passengers on the train became panic stricken, recalling the crash a week ago last night in which 17 persons were killed underneath Times Square.

The accident early this morning was of no serious consequence. The work train was operating on a middle track and the north-bound passenger train was on an outer track.

They passed at a curve and the eighth car of the passenger train struck the box car that headed the four car work train. Glass was shattered, one car of the passenger train was derailed, and four men injured.

Hugh McDevitt, motorman of the work train, suffered internal injuries and Samuel Lillenthal suffered bruises. Both were taken to the Lincoln hospital. James R. Cuff and Herbert Schneidermann were cut by flying glass, treated, and then sent to their homes.

But the nerves of the 75 passengers on the train gave way after they heard the booming thud of the crash. The splintering glass, saw the tracks flying from the rail and then watched the train lights go out.

A panic ensued. Several women on the train were reported to have fainted. Men rushed to the doors, shouting:

"Open the doors, open the doors."

The excitement lasted only a few minutes but during that short period was intense. Police were able to climb down to the tracks and finally were able to calm the passengers without any doors, shouting:

New York Shivers In First Heat Relief On Friday

His right hand was drawn into the machinery and the bones of his right arm above the wrist were broken. Dr. Courtwright reduced the fracture.

There were none present when the accident occurred, but when Mr. Ballard called for help, Noah Myers and Raymond Owens, of the Gem restaurant, came to his relief and called Dr. Courtwright.

Mr. Ballard rooms at the home of Misses Maye and Cora Pickens on S. Central. An X-Ray was taken of the injury today by his attending surgeon.

IS SAID TO BE SENTIMENT OF LARGE GROUP

Democratic Platform Is Praised At Meeting Held Last Night.

DES MOINES, Ia., Sept. 1.—The candidacy of Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York for the presidency has been given tacit endorsement by the corn belt committee, said to represent 1,000,000 farm families in the middle west.

Resolutions adopted by the committee last night, praised the democratic platform on farm rates and expressed dissatisfaction with that of the Republican party.

Farmers in the wheat growing states, the resolution said, were not benefitting from the 37 percent tariff, but were marketing their cash crops at half the cost of production.

"We are fully aware," the statement continued, "of the failure of the tariff to be effective in case of surpluses."

"The Democratic platform of 1928 pledges the party to enact legislation that will prevent the price of surplus from determining the price of the white crop, recognizes the principal that the problem of dealing with surplus must be distributed over a marketed commodity whose producers are benefited by such assistance."

The committee expressed approval of the Democratic platform's stand on this platform, revealed in his acceptance speech. It did not, however, name Gov. Smith or Herbert Hoover. The Democratic platform declared to recognize the tariff as ineffective and to place upon the crops of wheat produce an exportable surplus and praised for his decision "in favor of legislation to make the tariff effective on such crops."

The Republican platform declared inadequate in its failure to take up the problem of surpluses.

"The Republican candidate," the resolution said, "has not recognized the right of farmers to organize to be heard in the shaping of farm legislation."

Members of the committee included: K. C. Talbot, president of the farmers union of North Dakota; Milo Reno, president of the Iowa Farmers Union; Ralph Snyder, president of the Kansas Farmers; Harry Parmenter, representing the Nebraska Farmers Union, and Col. G. C. Lambert of Minnesota.

William Hirth, Missouri farm leader and chairman of the committee, who previously had endorsed the Democratic farm relief plank, was prevented from attending illness.

MAY DETERMINE CAUSE OF FREILING'S DEATH

STUEBENVILLE, O., Sept. 1.—Whether John Freiling, aged and wealthy retired business man, took his own life in a fit of despondency or was murdered may be determined today.

The mystery was as deep as ever when Prosecutor Roy M. Merryman resumed his inquiry 24 hours after Freiling's body, a bullet thru the heart, was found in the bedroom of his home at Milgo, a river town four miles from here.

Mrs. Agnes Perkins Freiling, the dead man's second wife, placidly went about arrangement for the funeral, a peacemaker in a family which has been split since Freiling married the second time. Mrs. Freiling, a handsome brunet of 43, said she had no fears as to the outcome of the investigation.

"I told my complete story to the coroner and have done all I can," she said.

"Suspicion pointed to Mrs. Freiling, but she has thoroughly accounted for herself," Merryman announced.

There was little question, the officials said, but that the wheel was from that plane.

It was the first word of the St. Raphael in exactly one year.

On Aug. 31, 1927, Princess Ann and her two flying companions, Col. F. F. Minchin and Captain Leslie Hamilton decided on a trans-Atlantic flight. Early that morning they whirled the big Fokker away from an English landing field and started westwardly towards a fate that was problematical.

Never had any one succeeded in making that dangerous flight. Nungesser and Col. Coll, the gallant French war veterans, had disappeared. Other English flyers had disappeared.

Princess Ann, titled, wealthy, and nearing the close of a luxurious life, had decided on this great thrill of flying over the unknown Atlantic. She was the first woman ever to attempt anything so dangerous but she had all the confidence in her big Fokker plane and the two English war veteran flyers.

LOCAL MEN FIGURE IN ACCIDENT ON FRIDAY EVENING

Proctor Baughman and Melvin S. Rinehart, of this city, were implicated in an automobile accident which occurred Friday evening as they were driving north on the Columbus-pk, when their car, a Studebaker, was sideswiped by a Lincoln sedan, driven by Joseph O'Shaughnessy, of Columbus.

It is alleged that Mr. O'Shaughnessy was driving on the wrong side of the road and that the local men, in endeavoring to avoid the crash, drove into a filling station. In the impact, Mr. Rinehart was knocked from the front seat, but fortunately escaped with but a slight injury to his right hand.

The right and left fenders were torn from the Baughman car, and the entire side was smashed.

Another car coming into the filling station at the time narrowly escaped collision with the cars.

Charred Wreckage of Lindy Death Plane

In a Falcon-Curtiss biplane, which was owned and soon to be flown by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, M. M. Merrill, manager of Curtiss Field, New York, and Edwin Rönne, manager of Boston's municipal airport, crashed to death. The shattered and fire-swept ruins above, were sighted by air searchers in the depths of a wilderness near Milford, Vt. The tragedy recalled that Col. Lindbergh's life had once been imperiled when he was forced down by a fire in the same plane.

ANOTHER SUBWAY ACCIDENT IN NEW YORK CITY

Accident Proves Of No Serious Consequence; Few Injured.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Almost within a week of the fatal accident on the interborough Subway lines, another accident occurred early today resulting in four injuries.

A 10 car passenger train of the I. R. T., operating on the elevated part of the system, sideswiped a supply train.

There was a derailment. Steel coming in contact with the third rail sent great electric flashes into the air and the 75 passengers on the train became panic stricken, recalling the crash a week ago last night in which 17 persons were killed underneath Times Square.

The accident early this morning was of no serious consequence. The work train was operating on a middle track and the north-bound passenger train was on an outer track.

They passed at a curve and the eighth car of the passenger train struck the box car that headed the four car work train. Glass was shattered, one car of the passenger train was derailed, and four men injured.

Hugh McDevitt, motorman of the work train, suffered internal injuries and Samuel Lillenthal suffered bruises. Both were taken to the Lincoln hospital. James R. Cuff and Herbert Schneidermann were cut by flying glass, treated, and then sent to their homes.

But the nerves of the 75 passengers on the train gave way after they heard the booming thud of the crash, the splintering glass, saw the sparks flying from the rail and then watched the train lights go out.

A panic ensued. Several women on the train were reported to have fainted. Men rushed to the doors, shouting:

"Open the doors, open the doors."

The excitement lasted only a few minutes but during that short period was intense. Police were able to climb down to the tracks and finally were able to calm the passengers without any serious consequences.

There were none present when the accident occurred, but when Mr. Ballard called for help, Noah Myers and Raymond Owens, of the Gem restaurant, came to his relief and called Dr. Courtwright.

Mr. Ballard rooms at the home of Misses May and Cora Pickens on S. Court-st. An X-Ray will be taken of the injury today by his attending surgeon.

IS SAID TO BE SENTIMENT OF
LARGE GROUP

Democratic Platform Is Praised At Meeting Held Last Night.

DES MOINES, Ia., Sept. 1.—The candidacy of Gov. Alfred E. Smith of New York for the presidency has been given tacit endorsement by the corn belt committee, said to represent 1,000,000 farm families in the middle west.

Resolutions adopted by the committee last night praised the democratic platform on farm relief and expressed dissatisfaction with that of the Republican party.

Farmers in the wheat growing states, the resolution said, were not benefitting from the 42 per cent tariff, but were marketing their cash crops at half the cost of production.

"We are fully aware," the statement continued, "of the failure of the tariff to be effective in case of surpluses."

"The Democratic platform of 1928 pledges the party to enact legislation that will prevent the price of surplus from determining the price of the white crop. It recognizes the principal that the problem of dealing with surpluses must be distributed over each marketed commodity whose products are benefited by such assistance."

The committee expressed approval of the Democratic candidate's stand on this platform revealed in his acceptance speech. It did not, however, specially name Gov. Smith or Herbert Hoover. The Democratic nominee was declared to recognize "that the tariff is ineffective and of no value upon the crops of which we produce an exportable surplus," and praised for his declaration "in favor of legislation to make the tariff effective on such crops."

The Republican platform was declared inadequate in its failure to take up the problem of surpluses.

"The Republican candidate," the resolution said, "has not recognized the right of farmers to organize to be heard in the shaping of farm legislation."

Members of the committee included: K. C. Talbot, president of the farmers union of North Dakota; Milo Reno, president of the Iowa Farmers Union; Ralph Snyder, president of the Kansas Farmers; Harry Parmenter, representing the Nebraska Farmers Union, and Col. G. C. Lambert of Minnesota.

William Hirth, Missouri farm leader and chairman of the committee, who previously had endorsed the Democratic farm relief plank, was prevented from attending illness.

MAY DETERMINE CAUSE OF FREILING'S DEATH

STREUBENVILLE, O., Sept. 1.—Whether John Freiling, aged and wealthy retired business man, took his own life in a fit of despondency or was murdered may be determined today.

The mystery was as deep as ever when Prosecutor Roy N. Merryman resumed his inquiry 24 hours after Freiling's body, a bullet thru the heart, was found in the bedroom of his home at Mingo, a river town four miles from here.

Mrs. Agnes Perkins Freiling, the dead man's second wife, placidly went about arrangement for the funeral, a peacemaker in a family which has been split since Freiling married the second time. Mrs. Freiling, a handsome brunet of 43, said she had no fears as to the outcome of the investigation.

"I told my complete story to the coroner and have done all I can," she said.

"Suspicion pointed to Mrs. Freiling, but she has thoroughly accounted for herself," Merryman announced.

CHILD DIES

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 1.—Death today had claimed Herold Parkinson, 6, who was internally injured Aug. 21 when he was run over by an automobile his father, Floyd R. Parkinson, was backing out of a garage.

The child, who died in a hospital, was standing outside of the garage when his father backed out the car. One of the wheels passed over his body.

for Sunday, Sept. 2:
1.—Why the Church? What would your community be without your church?

2.—How can church members all be building up one another?

3.—How does Paul's organizing work show his practical wisdom?

4.—How could our church better fulfill its function?

5.—What is there about our church (denomination) that is different from others?

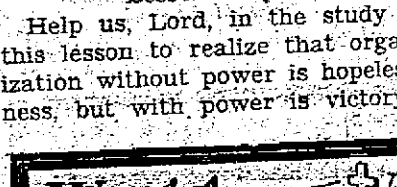

6.—What is the best thing in our church?

7.—To what extent are we to depend on scholars for our views of the Bible and its teachings?

8.—How can a church be like a man who plants a tree. It will long be there to spread its shade in summer's heat and drop its autumn fruit; and there the wandering birds will find a home.

Lincoln said, "I believe it is the duty of nations as well as of men, to own their dependence upon the overruling power of God and to invoke the influence of his Spirit; to confess their sins and transgressions in humble sorrow; yet with assured hope that genuine repentance will lead to mercy and pardon."

1. HOW CAN THE CHURCH INFLUENCE PUBLIC OPINION?

The church must recognize and use the factors which are now molding the thought and attitude of the masses on public questions.

One of these factors is the public press; only one out of four attend church but all four read the newspapers every day. It is hardly too much to say that the sympathies and prejudices of most men are affected by the

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
Paul in Thessalonica—Acts 17:1-12

Sept. 2. (Acts 17:1-12)

Paul had started out to be a preacher—a herald of the Christ, the future King of the world. Little by little as people believed his message here and there, it was necessary to form them into churches, and from that time on Paul was as busy organizing and advising churches as he was preaching.

Vs. 1-2. "Now... they came to Thessalonica, where there was a synagogue... and Paul went in as his custom was." Paul's piety and his worship had grown into an unconscious habit. It was not a matter of feeling or convenience or taste with him whether or not he would go to church. Some people go to church according to the weather or their wardrobe instead of according to the almanac and the clock.

Vs. 3. Paul reasoned from the Scriptures "opening and alleging that it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise again from the dead; and that this Jesus, whom said he, I proclaim unto you is the Christ."

Two fundamental doctrines thus preached and pressed upon these Jews, the atonement and the resurrection of Christ. We wreck the gospel when we smooth down or eliminate either the atonement or the resurrection, the two foundation stones without which the whole structure would fall to ruin.

V. 4. "Some of them were persuaded." They cast all they had into the Christian life and staked everything upon it. "And of the chief women not a few."

Woman was given an equal place in the kingdom with man and there she stands today.

V. 5. "And some believed not." The human will has sovereign powers and may thrust its resistance against the holiest truth of God.

V. 6. "These that turned the world upside down are come hither or also." The gospel does turn the world upside down, because it is wrong side up and needs to be turned. Christ came to put everything in its right place.

When conscience controls life and Christ sits on the throne, then the world will be right side up.

V. 7. "These all act contrary to the decrees of Caesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus." It was false that Christians were political traitors, but it was true that "there is another king, one Jesus." One Jesus now shines, the master of the spiritual world and more will his kingdom widen and deepen until the kingdoms of this world are his.

V. 10. "And the brethren sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berea where there was a synagogue. Not enough of synagogues yet? The synagogue was his first battleground and though it cost him many a stoning, the sight of one always stirred the war spirit in him and he put on his armor for another fight.

V. 11. "Now these were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, examining the scriptures daily." These Bereans investigated for themselves whether these things were so. Second hand opinions did not count with them. The battle was not between the old and the new but between the false and the true.

V. 12. "Many of them therefore believed."

Love is more final than war. We must teach the children of the world that friendships are better protection than battleships.

If arguments are retained, the war mentality cannot be destroyed.

The Church Invites You

The Sublime Duty of Man

Lincoln said, "I believe it is the duty of nations as well as of men, to own their dependence upon the overruling power of God and to invoke the influence of his Spirit; to confess their sins and transgressions in humble sorrow; yet with assured hope that genuine repentance will lead to mercy and pardon."

"I believe it is meet and right to recognize the presence of the Almighty equally in our triumphs and in our sorrows which we may justly fear are the punishments inflicted upon us for our presumptuous sins to the needful end of our reformation."

Why not own your dependence upon the overruling power of God, accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

1. HOW CAN THE CHURCH INFLUENCE PUBLIC OPINION?

The church must recognize and use the factors which are now molding the thought and attitude of the masses on public questions. One of these factors is the public press; only one out of four attend church but all four read the newspapers every day. It is hardly too much to say that the sympathies and prejudices of most men are affected by the the Commission on the Church and Race Relations of the Federal Council of Churches.

The Near East Relief Commission has just finished winding up its affairs in what has been called "the world's greatest adventure in international friendship." Over $105,000,000 were spent in one of the most war-torn, race-cursed sections of the world during the period of the last 13 years. The people in these countries have been placed on their feet and are ready to face their future without the assistance formerly given them.

press more than by any other single factor. If the church would offer to the public press religious news such as interprets Christianity as the best way of life in the modern world giving the local events in which this interpretation is made presented in newspaper style, liberal space would be gladly granted.

Another far-reaching influence in molding opinion of the rank and file is the recreational life of the community. A single phase will suggest the immensity of the problem—the motion picture house. That practically the whole civilized world goes to the movies and that children and young people—those in the formative period of life—attend with regularity is a fact of tremendous consequence. In the early centuries the church was the foster mother of the drama, the mystery play being its direct creation. The influential agencies of the church ought to effect an organization so forceful as to cause the producers of the moving picture films to give religious messages and information. Here would be a fine opportunity for the greatly needed missionary education of the church for the presentation of the practical Christian principles for human brotherhood and world peace.

Any social and industrial system which grinds up men and women and children to make cheap goods is an un-Christian system.

Religious and patriotism are the two most powerful stimuli.

An ounce of silence is better than a pound of explanation.

Rockefeller's Advice for Thrift

John D. Rockefeller had an experience which has value for young people. Mr. Rockefeller was raised on the farm; when 15 years of age he took a business course and secured a position as a bookkeeper's helper—his pay being almost nothing. In his ledger is found the record of earning $50 from Sept. 26, 1855 to Jan. 1, 1856. During that time he spent $5.09 for clothing and gave $5.58 to the church and charity.

The oil king's advice to young men is: "Keep a little ledger as I did. Write down in it what you receive, and do not be ashamed to write in it what you pay away. See that you pay in such a manner that your father or mother may look over your book and see just what you did with your money."

"It will help you to save money which you ought to do. I believe it is a religious duty to get all the money you can, fairly and honestly; to keep all you can, and to give away all you can."

D. Carl Yoder.

The test of an ideal industrial order is freedom for a happy, useful, untrammelled life and equal social advantages and opportunities.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
Paul in Thessalonica—for Sunday.

Sept. 2. (Acts 17:1-12) Paul had started out to be a preacher—a herald of the Christ, the future king of the world. Little by little as people believed his message here and there, it was necessary to form them into churches, and from that time on Paul was as busy organizing and advising churches as he was preaching.

Vs. 1-2. "Now... they came to Thessalonica, where there was a synagogue... and Paul went in as his custom was." Paul's piety and his worship had grown into an unconscious habit. It was not a matter of feeling or convenience or taste with him whether or not he would go to church. Some people go to church according to the weather or their wardrobe instead of according to the almanac and the clock.

V. 3. Paul reasoned from the Scriptures "opening and alleging that it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise again from the dead; and that this Jesus, whom, said he, I proclaim unto you is the Christ." Two fundamental doctrines thus preached and pressed upon these Jews, the atonement and the resurrection of Christ. We wreck the gospel when we smooth down or eliminate either the atonement or the resurrection, the two foundation stones without which the whole structure would fall to ruin.

V. 4. "Some of them were persuaded." They cast all they had into the Christian life and staked everything upon it. "And of the chief women not a few." Woman was given an equal place in the kingdom with man and there she stands today.

V. 5. "And some believed not." The human will has sovereign powers and may thrust its resistance against the holiest truth of God.

V. 6. "These that turned the world upside down are come hither also." The gospel does turn the world upside down, because it is wrong side up and needs to be turned. Christ came to put everything in its right place. When conscience controls life and Christ sits on the throne, then the world will be right side up.

V. 7. "These all act contrary to the decrees of Caesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus." It was false that Christians were political traitors, but it was true that "there is another king, one Jesus." One Jesus now shines, the master of the spiritual world and more will his kingdom widen and deepen until the kingdoms of this world are his.

V. 10. "And the brethren sent away Paul and Silas by night unto Berea where there was a synagogue. 'Not enough of synagogues yet?' The synagogue was his first battleground and though it cost him many a stoning, the sight of one always stirred the war spirit in him and he put on his armor for another fight.

V. 11. "Now these were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with all readiness of mind, examining the scriptures daily." These Bereans investigated for themselves whether these things were so. Second hand opinions did not count with them. The battle was not between the old and the new but between the false and the true.

V. 12 "Many of them there-

LABOR DAY RELIGIOUS EDITORIAL

"Our Father, who art in Heaven, give us this day our daily bread" is the theme of the Labor Day Message presented by Dr. John McDowell, secretary of the Presbyterian Board of National Missions and addressed to the ten thousand churches of the denomination. He says in part the following:

"The church must prove to the world, especially the industrial world that it stands for equity as well as fraternity, for justice as well as love, for righteousness as well as mercy. The church today must show that fellowship with Christ creates a type of conscience in man that is more powerful than the hope of personal gain or class advantage; it must teach the employer, the employee and the consumer alike to think in terms of the mind of Christ and to act in harmony with the spirit of Christ. No social justice can be called Christian that does not go back to the authority of the giver of the Golden Rule, that great word, 'Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye also unto them.'"

"Let the statesmen make the laws of industry and let Christ make the statesman and we will have an industrial order that will not only make goods and make money but that also will make men who are free, efficient and fraternal, that will make homes which are clean, healthy and attractive and that will make communities which are democratic and Christian."

Love is more final than war. We must teach the children of the world that friendships are better protection than battleships.

If arguments are retained, the war mentality cannot be destroyed.

Boxers Ready For Gong In Premier Event

BOTH BOXERS ARE IN PINK OF CONDITION

Franklin Club's Show Labor Day Promises to Be Well Attended.

On Labor Day, the boxing fans of Circleville and vicinity will be treated to one of the snappiest cards ever to be presented in this city, when Danny Reaburn and Eddie Klusman match skill in a six round main go, which will feature the Franklin Athletic club's sport offering for that day. The fighters are in the best of condition for the affair, having trained diligently for the past month. Their records show that they are of the highest calibre, both men having defeated some of the best boxers in Ohio.

The semi final and preliminaries are all good. In the former "Chinkie" George of Chillicothe, and Joe Finkler of Cincinnati, will go six rounds or less. This promises to rank well with the main go.

The preliminaries have been well arranged and the boys are evenly matched.

Altogether the Franklin club will offer 26 rounds of high class boxing, and the price of admission will be only 50c, $1, and $1.50, and this low price of admission, accounts for the rapidly at which the tickets are going.

The show will take place at the Circleville Athletic club, and will start at 8:30 p. m.

Remember the Franklin club's motto of "First with the Best Always."

Baseball

Yesterday's hero—Paul Waner, whose home run in the fifth inning with Lloyd Waner on base, gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6 to 5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in the first game of a double header. Ray Kremer gave the Cardinals only four hits until the eighth inning when he weakened and was replaced by Burleigh Grimes. St. Louis won the second game, 6 to 2. Bottomley's home run clinching the game in the 8th inning.

Rube Walberg pitched the Philadelphia Athletics to a 3 to 2 victory over the Boston Red Sox. This victory brings the Mackmen to within two games of the league leading New York Yankees. MacFayden on the mound for the Red Sox, allowed only four hits.

Although out of 16 to 14, the Chicago Cubs defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 3, and are now only four and one-half games behind the St. Louis Cardinals. Curtis Walker, Cincinnati outfielder, was knocked unconscious when English's quick throw to first in attempting a double play caught him on the forehead.

The New York Giants dropped their eighth straight game by losing to the Brooklyn Robins 4 to 2. It was Dazzy Vance's eighteenth victory of the season. The Giants' runs resulted from Reese's home run with Jackson on base. Jake Flowers hit a homer for Brooklyn.

Dan Howley's St. Louis Browns returned home to defeat the Detroit Tigers, 5 to 2. Earl Whitehill was banished from the game for protesting a decision at the plate.

The Philadelphia Phillies and the Boston Braves divided a double header. Philadelphia won the first game, 4 to 3, and the Braves the nightcap, 4 to 1.

YOUTH VS. AGE IN TITLE MATCH

CHESTNUT HILLS, Mass., Sept. 1.—Two young American tennis players, almost infants in international competition, today will play two wily Australian veterans for the American doubles title.

George Lott, Jr., and Johnny Hennessey are the young Americans who will attempt to defend the American title. Their scintillating play thus far in the tournament has given them better than an even chance against Gerald Patterson and Jack Hawkes, two campaigners who have been playing doubles for years.

Lott and Hennessey defeated the No. 1 ranking foreign team yesterday when they eliminated the two Frenchmen, Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon. The victory was comparatively easy.

FLIERS HOP OFF
LE BOURGET FIELD, Paris, Sept. 1.—Two French fliers, Ludovic Arrachart and Georges Rigol, today were underway on a spirited attempt to establish a new world's long distance flying record, from Le Bourget to India.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY

From the movies to baseball is the strange path of Ernest Orsatti, plucky little outfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, has traversed.

Before Orsatti broke into baseball, he was acting before the camera, not in his own right but as a double for Buster Keaton. Orsatti was brought up near Hollywood and his close resemblance to the frozen faced comedian and his nerve got him a job in the movies. He did the dangerous tricks as Keaton's double and Buster got the applause.

Orsatti played baseball around the Hollywood lots on Sunday and so developed into a semi-pro player. Keaton, a great baseball fan, encouraged him to enter professional baseball. Orsatti joined a Pacific Coast League club, and soon attracted the attention of the St. Louis Cardinals, who purchased him out of the Houston Texas League Club in 1927.

Starred in Texas League. Orsatti developed into one of the stars of the Texas League, and was recalled by the Cardinals near the end of the season. In fact into the line-up at once. Orsatti made an immediate success. He hit well over 300 and fielded sensationally. His play came near landing the Cards in first place.

The Cards sent Orsatti back to the minors during the winter and it proved to be a bad mistake. Judgment by some one connected with the club. Fans around the circuit were astonished when they learned that Orsatti was to go to Milwaukee. He would have brought a fancy price from any of the other seven teams, but the Cards owned him outright and thus were able to farm him out again.

Undismayed, Orsatti stuck to his knitting, and became one of the stars of the American Association. In need of another outfielder in the final pennant drive, the Cardinals recalled Orsatti again late this season.

Orsatti got off the train the late afternoon of the first game of the recent crucial series with the Giants, and an hour later donned a Cardinal uniform and put in three of the seven hits—a single, double and a home run—made by St. Louis. Orsatti also made a home run in the second game and it was not his fault that the Giants swept the three game series.

Of Italian Extraction. When the Cards recalled Orsatti, Jim Bottomley, hard-hitting first baseman, was forced out of the game with an attack of influenza. Manager Bill McKechnie brought Orsatti in from the outfield and stationed him at first base in Bottomley's place. The shift in position did not hamper Orsatti, who continued his brilliant play.

Orsatti is a "Money player." He plays best when the going gets rough. If the Cardinals win the National League pennant, Orsatti will undoubtedly deserve a share of the credit for his brilliant work.

Of Italian extraction, Orsatti promises to become as popular in the National League as Tony Lazzeri is in the American League. Lazzeri has one of the largest followings of any player in baseball.

HERBERT HOOVER SEEKS RECREATION

By PAUL R. MALLON

United Press Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Having set the Republican campaign house in order, Herbert Hoover sought a little recreation today. He planned to go out to see Babe Ruth and company at the ball game this afternoon and is arranging for a fishing trip down Chesapeake Bay early next week.

The Republican presidential nominee is not an ardent baseball fan but he has always gone to three or four games at the Washington American League park each season. The New York Yankees are here battling to preserve their lead in the American League race and the lure of Babe Ruth swatting balls over the fence induced him to order his personal headquarters closed for the afternoon.

Likewise, it is his custom to go fishing down the bay once or twice each year. Accompanied by two or three personal friends and followed by a score of newspapermen and photographers, he expects to start out Wednesday in a 40 minutes.

AMERICANS WIN FROM ENGLISH

By FRANK GETTY
(United Press Sports Editor)
CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—The superiority of American amateur golf over the British brand has been demonstrated amply by the results of the Walker cup matches at Wheaton, where the team representing the United States won by the count of 14 to 1.

No accurate forecast of the outcome of the impending national amateur championship at Erie, Pa. was furnished by the contest for the international team trophy, which the Americans won for the fifth time in succession.

Bobby Jones, who will defend his title on the links at West Newton, Mass., in the tournament which starts September 10, overwhelmed his opponent, T. Phillip Perkins, the British amateur champion, 13 up and 12 to play. Jones played par golf under trying conditions in the morning, and was one under fours for the six holes necessary to complete his triumph in the afternoon.

No other golfer, American or British, played as well at Wheaton and it is reasonable to suppose that the next amateur champion of the United States was among the sixteen who contested for the Walker cup.

With the Stars

Rogers Hornsby (.380) tripled once and scored a run in three times at bat.

Paul Warner (.371) hit a home run and singled, scored two runs, batted in three runs, in seven times at bat.

Al Simmons (.354) singled and batted in one run in four trips.

Freddy Lindstrom (.344) went hitless in four times at bat.

Jim Bottomley (.335) hit a home run and two doubles, scoring two runs and batting in three runs in eight times at bat.

Babe Ruth (.399), Lou Gehrig (.373), and Goose Goslin (.351), were idle.

COCA-COLA TEAM

The Circleville Coca-Cola Recreation ball team came out losers with the Circleville Hi team, Friday evening. It was a spirited game from start to finish and the breaks of the game helped the Hi team win by a score of 9 to 4. The Coca-Cola team not only lost the game but they will entertain the winners to a dinner at Hanley's Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, so to the victors belong the spoils, and the Coca-Cola boys are hoping for revenge at an early date.

Del Rio Cables He'll Duel Carew in Paris and Then Denies It

DOLORES AND JAIME DEL RIO

Ex-Husband and Director Laugh at Reports of Bloody Meeting

By International Illustrated News

PARIS.—On the assumption that there must be some flame where there is so much smoke, friends of Dolores Carew, noted movie director, and Jaime del Rio, handsome former husband of Dolores del Rio, are daily expecting a clash between the two. Perhaps an exchange of shots in old Vincennes forest, maybe a meeting with rapier in one of the many secluded dells in the Bois de Boulogne.

But both the millionaire Mexican land owner and the movie impresario insist that they are the best of friends. They pooch-pooch the idea that either would be so "romantic" as to challenge the other over an affair of the heart. Nevertheless, the reports persist.

Dolores del Rio, who divorced the Mexican after seven years of supposedly ideal married life, is also in Paris, but has refused to speak on the matter of the duel. Somewhat petulantly she explained that she was more interested in shopping.

MARY AKIN

In 1924 del Rio and his wife, then just twenty, entertained a motion picture group "on location" near one of his beautiful Mexican "haciendas." The director was Carew, who was then honeymooning with his third wife, Mary Akin.

DOLORES DEL RIO AND EDWIN CAREWE

Millicaire Mexican Is Silent on Plans for Writing Future

The Carewes and the del Rios became friends.

Struck with the beauty and ability of Dolores, the director persuaded her to go to Hollywood with her husband. The latter seemed delighted with the experience. He devoted himself to writing until suddenly the couple decided on a trial separation "for the benefit of their careers."

A complete divorce soon followed and del Rio left Hollywood for New York, ostensibly to be near a market for his stories. Meanwhile the pretty wife of Carew herself obtained a divorce, gossip linking the name of Dolores with her husband. Then the director and his petite star sailed for France on an extended vacation. The dramatic meeting of young del Rio, his wife and the director followed.

Boxers Ready For Gong In Premier Event

BOTH BOXERS ARE IN PINK OF CONDITION

Franklin Club's Show Labor Day Promises to Be Well Attended.

On Labor Day, the boxing fans of Circleville and vicinity will be treated to one of the snappiest cards ever to be presented in this city, when Danny Reaburn and Eddie Klusman match skill in a six round main go, which will feature the Franklin Athletic club's sport offering for that day. The fighters are in the best of condition for the affair, having trained diligently for the past month. Their records show that they are of the highest calibre, both men having defeated some of the best boxers in Ohio.

The semi final and preliminaries are all good. In the former "Chinkie" George of Chillicothe, and Joe Finklea of Cincinnati, will go six rounds or less. This promises to rank well with the main go.

The preliminaries have been well arranged and the boys are evenly matched.

Altogether the Franklin club will offer 26 rounds of high class boxing, and the price of admission will be only 50c, $1, and $1.50, and this low price of admission, accounts for the rapidity at which the tickets are going.

The show will take place at the Circleville Athletic club, and will start at 8:30 p. m.

Remember the Franklin club's motto of "First with the Best Always."

Baseball

Yesterday's hero—Paul Waner, whose home run in the fifth inning with Lloyd Waner on base, gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 6 to 5 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in the first game of a double header. Ray Kremer gave the Cardinals only four hits until the eighth inning when he weakened and was replaced by Burleigh Grimes. St. Louis won the second game, 6 to 2. Bottomley's home run clinching the game in the 8th inning.

Rube Walberg pitched the Philadelphia Athletics to a 3 to 2 victory over the Boston Red Sox. This victory brings the MacKenzie to within two games of the league leading New York Yankees. MacFayden on the mound for the Red Sox, allowed only four hits.

Although out 16 to 14, the Chicago Cubs defeated the Cincinnati Reds, 5 to 3, and are now only four and one-half games behind the St. Louis Cardinals. Curtis Walker, Cincinnati outfielder, was knocked unconscious when English's quick throw to first in attempting a double play caught him on the forehead.

The New York Giants dropped their eighth straight game by losing to the Brooklyn Robins 4 to 2. It was Dazzy Vance's eighteenth victory of the season. The Giants' runs resulted from Reese's home run with Jackson on base. Jake Flowers hit a homer for Brooklyn.

Dan Howley's St. Louis Browns returned home to defeat the Detroit Tigers, 5 to 2. Earl Whitehill was banished from the game for protesting a decision at the plate.

YOUTH VS. AGE IN TITLE MATCH

CHESTNUT HILLS, Mass., Sept. 1.—Two young American tennis players, almost infants in international competition, today will play two wily Australian, veterans for the American doubles title.

George Lott, jr., and Johnny Hennessey are the young Americans who will attempt to defend the American title. Their scintillating play thus far in the tournament has given them better than an even chance against Gerald Patterson and Jack Hawkes, two campaigners who have been playing doubles for years.

Lott and Hennessey defeated the No. 1 ranking foreign team yesterday when they eliminated the two Frenchmen, Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon. The victory was comparatively easy.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY

From the movies to baseball is the strange path of Ernest Orsatti, plucky little outfielder of the St. Louis Cardinals, has traversed.

Before Orsatti broke into baseball, he was acting before the camera, not in his own right but as a double for Buster Keaton. Orsatti was brought up near Hollywood and his close resemblance to the frozen faced comedian and his nerve got him a job in the movies. He did the dangerous tricks as Keaton's double and Buster got the applause.

Orsatti played baseball around the Hollywood lots on Sunday and so developed into a semi-pro player. Keaton, a great baseball fan, encouraged him to enter professional baseball. Orsatti joined a Pacific Coast League club, and soon attracted the attention of the St. Louis Cardinals, who purchased him out of the Houston Texas League Club in 1927.

Starred in Texas League. Orsatti developed into one of the stars of the Texas League, and was recalled by the Cardinals near the end of the season. Injected into the line-up at once Orsatti made an immediate success. He hit well over 300 and fielded sensationally. His play came near landing the Cards in first place.

The Cards sent Orsatti back to the Minors during the winter and it proved to be a bad mistake in judgment by some one connected with the club. Fans around the circuit were astonished when they learned that Orsatti was to go to Milwaukee. He would have brought a fancy price from any

By PAUL R. MALLON

United Press Staff Correspondent. WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Having set the Republican campaign house in order, Herbert Hoover sought a little recreation today.

He planned to go out to see Babe Ruth and company at the ball game this afternoon and is arranging for a fishing trip down Chesapeake Bay early next week. The Republican presidential nominee is not an ardent baseball fan but he has always gone to three or four games at the Washington American League park each season. The New York Yankees are here battling to preserve their lead in the American League race and the lure of Babe Ruth swatting balls over the fence induced him to order his personal headquarters closed for the afternoon.

Likewise, it is his custom to go fishing down the bay once or twice each year. Accompanied by two or three personal friends and followed by a score of newspapermen and photographers, he expects to start out Wednesday in a private yacht to see if he has any better luck with the salt water fish than he had with the steel head trout in Northern California a month back. The candidate is known to be quite well pleased with the political situation.

WILL RETURN PRISONER Sheriff Frank Davis left for New Castle, Indiana, Saturday, to return Arthur Vaughn who is wanted on an alleged charge of non-support.

BIG MELLON A tip-top muskmelon weighing 8 3-4 pounds is on display at Barrere and Nickerson hardware store. The melon was raised by George Wright of Walnut-twp. one mile east of the Centralized school.

AMERICANS WIN FROM ENGLISH

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—The superiority of American amateur golf over the British brand has been demonstrated amply by the results of the Walker cup matches at Wheaton, where the team representing the United States won by the count of 14 to 1.

No accurate forecast of the outcome of the impending national amateur championship at Brae Burn was furnished by the contest for the international team trophy, which the Americans won for the fifth time in succession.

Bobby Jones, who will defend his title on the links at West Newton, Mass., in the tournament which starts September 10, overwhelmed his opponent, T. Phillip Perkins, the British amateur champion, 13 up and 12 to play. Jones played par golf under trying conditions in the morning, and was one under fours for the six holes necessary to complete his triumph in the afternoon.

No other golfer, American or British, played as well at Wheaton and it is reasonable to suppose that the next amateur champion of the United States was among the sixteen who contested for the Walker cup.

With the Stars

Rogers Hornsby (.380) tripled once and scored a run in three times at bat.

Paul Waner (.371) hit a home run and singled, scored two runs, batted in three runs, in seven times at bat.

Al Simmons (.354) singled and batted in one run in four trips.

Freddy Lindstrom (.344) went hitless in four times at bat.

Jim Bottomley (.355) hit a home run and two doubles, scoring two runs and batting in three runs in eight times at bat.

Babe Ruth (.399), Lou Gehrig (.373), and Goose Goslin (.381), were idle.

COCA-COLA TEAM

The Circleville Coca-Cola Recreation ball team came out losers with the Circleville Hi team, Friday evening. It was a spirited game from start to finish and the breaks of the game helped the Hi team win by a score of 9 to 4. The Coca-Cola team not only lost the game but they will entertain the winners to a dinner at Hanley's Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock, so to the victors belong the spoils, and the Coca-Cola boys are hoping for revenge at an early date.

Del Rio Cables He'll Duel Carew in Paris and Then Denies It

DOLORES AND JAIME DEL RIO

Ex-Husband and Director Laugh at Reports of Bloody Meeting

By International Illustrated News

PARIS.—On the assumption that there must be some flame where there is so much smoke, friends of Edwin Carew, noted movie director, and Jaime del Rio, handsome former husband of Dolores del Rio, are daily expecting a clash between the two. Perhaps an exchange of shots in old Vincennes forest; maybe a meeting with rapier in one of the many secluded dells in the Bois de Boulogne.

But both the millionaire Mexican land owner and the movie impresario insist that they are the best of friends. They pooh-pooh the idea that either would be so "romantic" as to challenge the other over an affair of the heart. Nevertheless, the reports persist. Dolores del Rio, who divorced the

The Carews and the del Rios became friends.

Struck with the beauty and allure of Dolores, the director persuaded her to go to Hollywood with her husband. The latter seemed delighted with the experiment. He devoted himself to writing, until suddenly the couple decided on a trial separation "for the benefit of their careers."

A complete divorce soon followed and del Rio left Hollywood for New York, ostensibly to be nearer a market for his stories. Meantime the pretty wife of Carew herself obtained a decree, gossip linking the name of Dolores with her husband. Then the director and his petite star sailed for France on an extended vacation. The dramatic meeting of young del Rio, his ex-wife and the director followed.

LABOR DAY IDEALS

Nearly half a century has passed since Labor Day was first observed. In the days when this holiday was first celebrated, the wage-earners occupied a very inferior position. They could not obtain what was fairly due them. They worked for very low pay, they toiled long and exhausting hours. Their working places were often unhealthy, they lived largely in poverty.

Today their situation has been greatly improved. Their hours of labor have become normal in most instances, working places have been vastly improved, their homes are very much better, they commonly have comforts that were never dreamed of in the days of our grandfathers.

Back in the old days it seemed to need a good deal of aggressiveness to obtain what could fairly be considered their rights. Many bitter labor conflicts were inevitable. But today the situation has changed. For every dollar they gain by fighting their employers, they usually lose many dollars through lack of co-operation.

Prosperity is obtained today by a harmonious union of all forces to make production efficient and economical, so that prices can be kept down, and so that prosperous employers can afford to pay good wages. There still may be extreme cases where labor troubles are inevitable. Where either party is unreasonable trouble will develop.

But strikes are in the field of industry, about the same as wars in international relations. Wars may sometimes be necessary, yet the world has about reached the conclusion that all parties in a war lose. It is much the same in the industrial field. People who discuss Labor Day should consider how the ideals of co-operation can be realized, and how employers and employees can work together for prosperity for all.

IMPROVING OUR DWELLINGS

People who own the older type of dwellings might well consider the advantages of improving them this season. Every dollar spent in keeping them up is directly added to their value.

If a house is allowed to go along year after year without much of anything being spent on it, the owners are likely to find out before many years that it is considered undesirable. People who consider buying it would figure on the cost of the many improvements necessary. So its value is depreciating fairly fast, unless wear and tear are repaired.

Also a rented house will not command so much money unless there is considerable willingness to keep it up and make improvements. As a house becomes shabby and unattractive, its value declines.

THE HOME AS AN ANCHOR

Some people remark that they would like to own their own homes, but they do not want to tie themselves down to any one place. They want to be perfectly free, any time they see any other job, to pull up stakes and go on short notice. They think if they owned a house, they would have to stay where it was, and that if they tried to sell it, it might take so long to get a fair price for it, that they would miss some desirable opportunity.

That point of view ignores the fact that when people move around from place to place, they very frequently do not come out as well as if they had stayed where they were. Some people seem to need an anchor like a home of their own to keep them from making impulsive moves.

However, if people buy a house in Circleville and keep it up nicely, it is very rare that it won't sell for a fair price, and usually for more than people gave for it.

September,
The first faint dying ember
Of a summer's sun
Will soon glide by
With you;
Soft rains that once were
Dew
Are changing now to frost—
The crimson, yellow,
White-winged butterfly
Glides heavily along,
While here and there a cricket
Sadly chirps
His Song of Death,
The dry and dusty breath
Of once a fresh, flower-laden
Air
Has scattered over
Dying flowers
Brown, crinkled leaves—
The rosy petals covers
And turns its head—and dies!
While reddened skies
Are speckled with
Dark, fleeting forms—

THE GREAT WAR TEN YEARS AGO TODAY

September 1, 1918.

President Wilson, in proclamation, calls all men from 18 to 45 years old, to enroll before September 12.

Australian troops capture St. Quentin Hill after hard fighting. American infantry aid French in a new offensive against enemy's stone-wall defense. Ludendorff fighting hard to stave off rout.

during that month compared with the previous year.
That railroad has been holding accident prevention meetings in its shops and elsewhere, and these have probably led to more cautious operation by employees. Many corporations could reduce accidents, and thus save loss and poverty, if they would give such instruction to their workers. When a mechanic is hurt, the working power of the nation and of his employer is impaired.

THE COMMUNITY'S EXTERIOR

Many people, in choosing locations for homes or business, are influenced by the exterior appearance of a community. If a town is nicely kept, if its business and public buildings are well maintained, if its homes look neat, and thrifty, people say that will be a good place to live and do business in.

A business man who contemplates starting a new enterprise would say that such a community was likely to have plenty of intelligent workers who could take hold of his work and help him make a success of it. He would think favorably of such a town as a home for his family and a place where children could be well brought up.

Love's Ecstasy

by May Christie

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.
A LEDA RAY, pretty country girl working in New York as a stenographer, and Gary Chester, young engineer, are in love. Aleda is living with Marise de Rense and the latter's young, sophisticated sister, Goldie. Goldie, jealous of Aleda, tricks her into attending a scandalous party and then notifies Chester. Gary, disillusioned, avoids Aleda. Goldie, visiting Aleda's office, meets Gary Chester and again maliciously poisons his mind with falsehoods about Aleda.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.
CHAPTER XLIV.
LEDA walked up Wall Street with misty eyes. Intolerable disappointment nagged at her.
Up to the last minute, till the arrival of Goldie—an unwelcome visitor—she had hoped, even against her better judgment, that Gary Chester would telephone to her.

That curtly worded note, with the return of the case!
Even though it had wounded her, she thought: "He didn't mean it! He was indignant—shocked—perhaps even jealous"—(and wasn't jealousy a sign of love?)—she tried to buoy herself with that. "He'll come out of his mood—his feeling for me is too strong to let a little thing come between us—before the day's over he'll telephone!"

He had not done so. He had apparently wished to call off their evening together. Unconscious that she had missed Gary by only a matter of minutes, and that Goldie was, at this very instant, trying to poison the young man's mind against her, Aleda—with blurred eyes and a real headache—walked up Wall Street.

The soft air of June caressed her pretty features. There would be a moon again tonight—a wisp of a moon—the same slim crescent that had smiled so sympathetically on the pair of them only last evening!

Was it so short a while ago? It seemed like centuries!
This love! She knew (no use denying it!) how much, how achingly, he "counted" in her life.

"To love is to suffer," says the old French proverb. And now, for the first time in her brief span of years, Aleda was learning the meaning of this pain.
But she held her chin up. In the straight little linen frock that showed the sweet curves of her slim body, she looked like a young Diana, gallantly facing life.

"You remember our chats at the Harvest Moon? That's the little night-club where I dance. Your friend the countess said something—it was ever so sweet of her!"

Impolite

A little girl lives near a dog which is loved and cared for by a childless woman. The owner of the dog came to call on the little girl's mother.

"Mrs. Blank," she said, "I think Mary is changing so much. I don't want to have any hard feelings, but I really thought you ought to know that I overheard her being very impolite."

"Sure, I want to know, and thank you for calling my attention to the matter. I shall speak to Mary about it. What did Mary say?" asked the agitated mother.

"My dog was out in front as she went to school and she said, 'You dirty, cur, don't you dare touch me.'"

Saturday as a Holiday

Miss Freygang of the New York city department of education, says: "It is my understanding that the Saturday holiday never began in the cities, but in the rural sections of our country. It is my understanding, that it originated in the Colonial days, when there were very few Jews in the community. I believe Saturday began as a holiday in schools because the children on the farms had to help with the work, so that Sunday might be observed by the family. They had to bring in provisions for the Sabbath and help in the home so that they might start out to the nearest church which was usually miles away."

Literary Touch

Possibly it was the first breath of spring in the air that sent a certain unknown author skipping into the offices of Simple & Simons, book publishers.

"How long should a novel be?" asked the tyro of the first man he saw. It happened to be Mr. Simple.

"There is no statutory limit," answered the latter.
But the would-be author pressed him for some suggestion, and the publisher finally admitted that most standard novels were about eighty thousand words long.
"Thank heaven!" declared the other. "I've finished, then."

HEALTH A FACTOR IN CLEAR THINKING

When Everyone Cares for His Body as He Should, Says Dr. Copeland, Criminal Tendencies Will Diminish.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.
United States Senator from New York,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

WHAT this world needs more than anything else is straight thinking. You can't think straight unless you have a clear mind and a clear brain. These in turn depend on a clear body.

In the last analysis, then, what you are what you can give the world depends on physical welfare.

We used to look upon insanity as a "psychological" thing. There was supposed to be something wrong with the spiritual or intangible of the man, with his mind separate apart from his body.

We don't accept this hopeless and nebulous idea any more. No longer are we willing to admit to the thought that an "evil spirit" or some obscure mental kink is responsible for the disturbance. We know now that the unhappy victim cannot think straight because something is wrong with the physical part of the man.

The other day I was at the Bear Mountain Boy Scout Camp. Governor Smith was making his annual inspection of this great institution. Dear old Uncle Dan Beard addressed the Scouts and so did Commander Richard Byrd.

All these men emphasized, and properly so, I believe, the importance of the healthy body. It is rare, indeed, for a man to achieve any sort of success in life unless he has a reasonable degree of health. His thinking is less likely to be straight without it.

Sometimes we fail to place correct value on the things we do and the things we possess. We endure certain defects, regarding them as inevitable perhaps, or at least as not worth our while to overcome.

For instance, nobody likes to be fat, but why? For the looks of it! But that isn't a sufficient reason. When you come to measure excessive fatness in terms of lessened efficiency and shortened life, it becomes a matter to cry over and not to laugh at. It isn't a matter of looks—it relates to your very life. It interferes with straight thinking. It makes you "lazy" and sleepy and dull. It lessens your usefulness.

The care you give your body, not to make it look attractive, but to make it a perfectly functioning machine, will determine largely what sort of thinking you will do.

The other day I read about a famous actor who takes as much as ten hours to "make-up" his face for some part he is to play. I have an idea some of the women I have seen in my day have taken little less time in their make-up.

But this isn't the sort of treatment I have in mind. Several hours every day devoted to exercise and fresh air, with the improvement of the circulation and muscular development, are a sort of "make-up" that will fit you for life in mental, social and professional battles, as well as the improvement of your personal appearance. This practice will help you to think straight.

Criminal tendencies, bad thoughts and practices, as well as lesser evils will be reduced to the vanishing point when men and women, boys and girls, care for their bodies as they should. Length of life and the quality of life will be promoted by care of the health. Right thinking follows as a matter of course.

To think straight you must live straight.

Her Remarkable Right Arm Stronger Than Steel Cable

But Lillian Leitzel Can't Take a Vacation Like
Ordinary Folks

By SHIRLEY KIRKE

CHICAGO (I. L. N.).—The interesting little lady in the adjoining column raises her weight with her right arm and throws her agile body over her right shoulder 194 times in about six minutes. As she weighs only about 110 pounds, she therefore lifts with the muscles of one arm roughly 21,000 pounds—or ten and one-half tons—in that brief space of time.

Ten times a day pretty Lillian Leitzel performs this feat of strength and endurance before circus spectators. No flexible steel cable ever devised by man would stand this strain. So sharply on edge are the tendons, muscles, ligaments and trained nerves of this remarkable arm that the queen of the world's acrobats doesn't dare to take a vacation like other girls. For if she should stop training or be confined to her bed for more than a week she would lose forever the control of that wonderful arm.

Of course, nature never constructed the human frame to perform any such miracle of stress and strain. Nobody else in the world ever undertook to accomplish this achievement. But if little Miss Leitzel can lift ten and one-half tons in a little more than five minutes under the disadvantageous circumstances of hanging by her wrist—what is there remaining to be accomplished in future generations by other industrious, persistent trainers of human functions like the voice, the fingers, the legs, or, greatest of all, the human brain?

The pretty Lillian, in private life the wife of Alfredo Cordona, be-

LILLIAN LEITZEL

Heves it is possible to do whatever one wishes to do—provided one fights hard enough for victory. Her body was undergoing training at 2 and at 5 this child of the "big top" was an accomplished acrobat. From that time until she was a sensation she "practiced" hours daily, coaxing her muscles to obey the orders of her nimble brain. The star, however, thinks her mother was the greatest woman acrobat of them all. When she was forty-two years old, she performed a swan dive from the top of Madison Square Garden straight down into a net that was stretched across the ring as tight as a drum. She alighted on the back of her shoulders and neck, bounced twenty-five feet into the air and came down feet first. Her white sandals twinkling like a baller dancer's.

The queen of acrobats enjoys most the hours of homemaking underneath her own "private top," where as Mrs. Cordona she reigns between performances.

OLIVE STOCK

SIFTED OAT CHOP FOR LITTLE PIGS

If oat chop is to be fed to little pigs it is a worth-while practice to sift out the hulls. The hulls are not only unpalatable to the young stock, but they are very difficult to digest. If time cannot be taken to remove the hulls, it is doubtful if oat chop can be fed profitably to pigs under three or four months of age unless one is growing the hullless oats which threshes out ready for grinding into oatmeal which is good for all classes of stock. In an experiment conducted at the Lacombe (Saskatchewan) experiment station to test the advantage of removing the hulls from oat chop for little pigs, it was shown that during a feeding period of 12 days the gains made by the lot fed the oat chop with the hulls removed cost a little less than $4 a hundred pounds, whereas it cost $5.70 per hundred pounds with the pigs given the oat chop complete. Furthermore the lot getting the unsifted chop had to be carried on for about six weeks on a ration of barley chop to bring them up to a finishing weight.

Bulletin No. 73 of the department of agriculture at Ottawa, entitled "Swine Husbandry in Central Alberta," expresses the view that the labor involved in sifting the oats by hand prohibits following the practice when large numbers of hogs are fed. Hullless oats, the authors of the bulletin claim, is the logical feed to use in the weaning ration when middlings and shorts are not available. The conclusion is reached that oat hulls as contained in oat chop are detrimental to young pigs during the weaning period of the market hog when the oat ration is continued throughout the entire feeding period.

Linseed, Alfalfa Meal Good Corn Supplements

Tankage and skim milk are highly efficient protein supplements to corn for hogs, points out Grady Sellars, an extension field agent for the Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Unfortunately," he continues, "the production of these two good supplements is insufficient to balance all the corn fed to hogs, necessitating the use of other supplementary feeds."

"Although tests show that protein supplements from animal sources are more efficient than those from vegetable sources, it has been found that combinations of animal and vegetable supplements are more effective than either type used singly."

"Of the best of these combinations is found tankage, 50 parts; linseed oilmeal, 25 parts, and alfalfa meal, 25 parts, all by weight. "Alfalfa meal is not necessary when hogs are running on good pasture. Some hog men use the following proportions: Tankage, 50 parts; linseed oilmeal, 35 parts, and alfalfa meal, 15 parts."

"Alfalfa hay may be used instead of alfalfa meal. In practically all tests the two have given equally good results. In the event alfalfa hay is not available, clover or soybean hay may be used."

Weaning Fall Pigs With the Least Disturbance

Weaning pigs with the least disturbance to their continued growth is an art well worth learning. A very successful Indiana hog raiser provides a crisp and suitable feed for pigs while they are still nursing their dams. At eight weeks of age the sow's feed is gradually restricted which shuts down on milk production. When the time is right the sows are taken away from the pigs and not the pigs from their dams. In this way by leaving the pigs in the quarters they are accustomed to they are weaned without knowing what has been done.

Clipping Horses

The work of clipping horses is expensive. The work can be done at home with the regular help or some one with experience can be employed for the purpose. However, experience is not necessary. Some farmers clip only the body of their horses, leaving the hair on the legs. While this does not make a very clean looking job, it serves a very good purpose so far as the comfort of the horse is concerned. Some believe that it is better to have the protection on the legs.

Time to Shear

Among the thousands of farm sheepmen, there are many ideas as to the time of spring to shear. Many like to wait until rather warm weather has prevailed some time, with the idea of getting more grease in the wool and selling that much more weight. However, it's best for the sheep to clip as soon as the weather is warm enough. The ewes do much better and suckle their lambs better if they are rid of the winter burden early in the season.

Hairlessness of Pigs

Hairlessness of pigs is most common in those born late in winter or in early spring. Indicating that the winter feeding and management are at fault. In addition to feeding legumes the sows should have access to a good mineral mixture, or at least to slaked lime or ground limestone, salt, wood ashes or steamed bone meal, or some of the latter, in addition to potassium iodide, may be mixed with the feed. It is imperative, too, that the sows be made to take outdoor exercise.

COLUMBUS PLAYS HOST TO RASKOB PARTY AT DINNER

Stopped In Capital City Between Trains, Enroute To New York.

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 1.—Governor Alfred Smith will make two speeches in Ohio during the coming presidential campaign, according to Mrs. Bernice Pyke of Cleveland, Democratic national committeewoman. One will be in Cleveland and the other in Cincinnati. Dates are to be decided.

Mrs. Pyke, who sat next to John J. Raskob at the dinner given him here last night at the Neil House by the State Democratic committee, said she received this assurance from the national chairman.

Another item of strategy disclosed is that Mrs. John A. Warner, daughter of Governor Smith, who with Senator and Mrs. Peter Gerry of Rhode Island, accompanied Raskob, will travel widely over the country during the campaign.

Mrs. Warner, a slim young woman of considerable beauty and a knack for wearing clothes smartly, has inherited her father's contagious smile. She made a decided hit with those who met her at the reception following the dinner.

Mrs. Pyke will announce later special plans for organizing the Democratic women of the state.

An exclusive reception resembling a society affair more than a political rally greeted Raskob as his party stopped here last night between trains on its return to New York from the Robinson notification ceremonies.

No startling political pronouncements marked the gathering as Raskob delivered the principal speech of the evening.

G. CLIFFORD JONES, EDITOR OF THE ORANGE (N. J.) DAILY COURIER, SAYS:

THAT advertising begins at home.

It begins when a business man hops out of bed and under the shower. It continues with the dressing and shaving. It is present in the good spirits that the breakfast table of a happy home should engender.

And then the advertising end of his business finds expression in his own attitude about the store or the office, for as he thinks and acts so will his organization react. He thus advertises himself and his business to those he employs.

That kind of advertising is reflected in the way his employees meet his customers. The ready smile; the willingness to take pains; the attitude of service is good advertising.

And then advertising finds expression in his stocks. They must measure up to the expectations engendered by a decent smile and of course they must be properly displayed.

I recall the man who advertised some wares he wanted to get rid of. He didn't tell his department heads about it and they of course didn't tell the sales people. Customers asked for the goods and the salespeople and the department heads knew nothing about them. The customers went out in a huff. They said it was just an old game to get people into the store. And so I say, advertising begins at home and sticks out in every act connected with the business.

When it does just that, it pays AND PAYS BIG to advertise. Get Me? ADVERTISING BEGINS AT HOME AND THAT MEANS YOUR HOME!

LIVE STOCK

SIFTED OAT CHOP FOR LITTLE PIGS

If oat chop is to be fed to little pigs it is a worth-while practice to sift out the hulls. The hulls are not only unpalatable to the young stock, but they are very difficult to digest. If time cannot be taken to remove the hulls, it is doubtful if oat chop can be fed profitably to pigs under three or four months of age unless one is growing the hullless oats which thrives out ready for grinding into oatmeal which is good for all classes of stock. In an experiment conducted at the Lacombe (Saskatchewan) experiment station to test the advantage of sifting the hulls from oat chop for little pigs, it was shown that during a feeding period of 12 days the gains made by the lot fed the oat chop with the hulls removed cost a little less than $4 a hundred pounds, whereas it cost $5.70 per hundred pounds with the pigs given the oat chop complete. Furthermore the lot getting the unsifted chop had to be carried on for about six weeks on a ration of barley chop to bring them up to a finishing weight.

Bulletin No. 73 of the department of agriculture at Ottawa, entitled "Sowing Experiments in Central Alberta," express the view that the labor involved in sifting the oats by hand prohibits following the practice when large numbers of hogs are fed. The authors of the bulletin claim, is the logical feed to use in the weaning ration when middlings and shorts are not available. The conclusion is reached that oat hulls as contained in oat chop are detrimental to young pigs during the weaning period of the market hog when the oat ration is continued throughout the entire feeding period.

Linseed, Alfalfa Meal Good Corn Supplements

Tankage and skim milk are highly efficient protein supplements to corn for hogs, points out Grady Sellars, an extension field agent for the Kentucky College of Agriculture.

"Unfortunately," he continues, "the production of these two good supplements is insufficient to balance all the corn fed to hogs; necessitating the use of other supplementary feeds."

"Although tests show that protein supplements from animal sources are more efficient than those from vegetable sources, it has been found that combinations of animal and vegetable supplements are more effective than either type used singly."

"Of the best of these combinations is found tankage, 50 parts; linseed oil meal, 25 parts; and alfalfa meal, 25 parts, all by weight."

"Alfalfa meal is not necessary when hogs are running on good pasture. Some hog men use the following proportions: Tankage, 50 parts; linseed oil meal, 35 parts; and alfalfa meal, 15 parts."

"Alfalfa hay may be used instead of alfalfa meal. In practically all tests the two have given equally good results. In the event alfalfa hay is not available, clover or soybean hay may be used."

Weaning Fall Pigs With the Least Disturbance

Weaning pigs with the least disturbance to their continued growth is an art well worth learning. A very successful Indiana hog raiser provides a creep and suitable feeds for pigs while they are still nursing their dams. At eight weeks of age the sow's feed is gradually restricted which shuts down on milk production. When the time is right the sows are taken away from the pigs and not the pigs from their dams. In this way by leaving the pigs in the quarters they are accustomed to they are weaned without knowing what has been done.

Clipping Horses

The work of clipping horses is expensive. The work can be done at home with the regular help or some one with experience can be employed for the purpose. However, experience is not necessary. Some farmers clip only the body of their horses, leaving the hair on the legs. While this does not make a very clean looking job, it serves a very good purpose so far as the comfort of the horse is concerned. Some believe that it is better to have the protection on the legs.

Time to Shear

Among the thousands of farm sheepmen, there are many ideas as to the time of year to shear. Many like to wait until rather warm weather has prevailed some time, with the idea of getting more grease in the wool and selling that much more weight. However, it's best for the sheep to clip as soon as the weather is warm enough. The ewes do much better and suckle their lambs better if they are rid of the winter burden early in the season.

In addition to feeding legumes the sows should have access to a good mineral mixture, or at least to slaked lime or ground limestone, salt, wood ashes or steamed bone meal, or some of the latter, in addition to potassium iodide, may be mixed with the feed. Her Remarkable Right Arm Stronger Than Steel Cable

But Lillian Leitzel Can't Take a Vacation Like Ordinary Folks

By SHIRLEY KIRKE

CHICAGO (I. N. N.).—The interesting little lady in the adjoining column raises her weight with her right arm and throws her agile body over her right shoulder 194 times in about six minutes. As she weighs only about 110 pounds, she therefore lifts with the muscles of one arm roughly 21,000 pounds—or ten and one-half tons—in that brief space of time.

Ten times a day pretty Lillian Leitzel performs this feat of strength and endurance before circus spectators. No flexible steel cable ever devised by man would stand this strain. So sharply on edge are the tendons, muscles, ligaments and trained nerves of this remarkable arm that the queen of the world's acrobats doesn't dare to take a vacation like other girls. For if she should stop training or be confined to her bed for more than a week she would lose forever the control of that wonderful arm.

Of course, nature never constructed the human frame to perform any such miracle of stress and strain. Nobody else in the world ever undertook to accomplish this achievement. But if little Miss Leitzel can lift ten and one-half tons in a little more than five minutes under the disadvantageous circumstances of hanging by her wrist—what is there remaining to be accomplished in future generations by other industrious, persistent trainers of human functions like the voice, the fingers, the legs, or, greatest of all, the human brain?

The pretty Lillian, in private life the wife of Alfredo Cardona, believes it is possible to do whatever one wishes to do—provided one fights hard enough for victory. Her body was undergoing training at 1 and at 5 this child of the "big top" was an accomplished acrobat. From that time until she was a sensation she "practiced"—hours daily, coaxing her muscles to obey the orders of her nimble brain. The star, however, thinks her mother was the greatest woman acrobat of them all. When she was forty-two years old, she performed a swan dive from the top of Madison Square Garden straight down into a net that was stretched across the ring as tight as a drum. She alighted on the back of her shoulders and neck, bounced twenty-five feet into the air and came down feet first, her white sandals twinkling like a ballet dancer's.

The queen of acrobatics enjoys most the hours of homemaking underneath her own "private top," where as Mrs. Cardona she reigns between performances.
